Contents
Volume 1 Issue 1 | IJoHS October 2021

Editorial
1 The world as our oyster: the International Journal of Healthcare Simulation – Advances in Theory & Practice (IJoHS) as a new forum for healthcare simulation
Debra Nestel, Dinker Pai, Nancy McNaughton, Paul Murphy and John Paige

Original research
3 Evaluating the impact of simulation-based mental health training on self-efficacy: a retrospective data analysis
Aleks Saunders, Marta Ortega Vega, Hannah Ianelli, Sean Cross and Chris Attoe

11 Mental health crises in the emergency department: simulation training for interprofessional collaboration and teamwork attitudes
Maya GT Ogonah, Marta Ortega Vega, Lorena Valdearenas, Sean Cross and Chris Attoe

28 Simulation training for healthcare leaders supporting returning doctors
Kat Novogrudsky, Hannah Ianelli, Colette Laws-Chapman, Grégoire Billon, Zaina Jabur, Peter Jaye, Sean Cross and Chris Attoe

33 ‘It’s like a shot in the arm’: evaluating the experiences of older simulated participants in structured virtual meetings during COVID-19
Cathy M Smith, Lisa Guttman Sokoloff and Christina E Gallucci

Essays
41 Current status of simulation-based medical education in India and the way forward
Dinker R Pai

45 Authoring and othering: examining bias in scenario design
Kerry Knickle, Kerri Weir, and Nancy McNaughton

Debate
49 Is interprofessional co-debriefing necessary for effective interprofessional learning within simulation-based education?
Prashant Kumar, Catherine Paton, Hannah M Simpson, Ciara M King and Neil McGowan

Practice guidelines
56 A form of mental simulation with significant enhancements enabling teamwork training
Burcu Dogan, Natalie Pattison and Guillaume Alinier

Perspective
61 People being expert
Andy Buttery

Key concepts
63 Continuing professional development for faculty in simulation-based education
Prashant Kumar, Kathleen Collins, Catherine Paton and Neil McGowan